Killers with Benefits by Emerge Productions

For immediate release: 25/11/2022

Killers with Benefits is comedy of bad manners written by Tony Broadwick. Emerge Productions sponsored by City of Launceston has brought together an amazing group of new and experienced actors to perform together in this fast paced and exciting show.

This will be Emerge Productions Principal Owner Amanda Sutherlands' first foray into directing a show. She chose Killers with Benefits because of its farcical nature. It's a show that explores relationships, adultery, murder and our preconceptions of who a person is.

The scene is set with a lonely and bored housewife played by Racheal Leigh enjoying some music on the radio before being interrupted by a mysterious man who has broken into her house. The Man played by Nathaniel Wood convinces Mandy to let him stay the night where he witnesses the chaos that is Mandy's life. By the end of the show, we have a love quadrangle, murder plots, Murderers and just a little bit of alcohol infused antics.

Killers with Benefits is at Launceston's Earl Arts Centre between 6 & 11 December 2022.

Tickets start at $15 from Theatre North.

About Emerge Productions

Emerge Production's ethos is built on support for both new and more experienced artists alike. It is about working together to create something amazing. Amanda strongly believes that with the right support anyone can not only perform but perform at a high standard.
